Welcome to Aston Hall

Bamford Restaurant

In the Bamford Restaurant our Head Chef Craig and his team have created a unique blend of dishes that combine classic flavours with a contemporary twist.

The use of fresh and seasonal ingredients in our food is key and we aim to support local produce wherever possible across the menu.

If you have any questions regarding the menu please speak to one of our staff.

Thank You

Some History

The old Aston Hall was destroyed by fire in about 1767. This Aston Hall was started in 1772 and took nearly 50 years to finish. The structure of the Hall was continually being altered until 1825. It was originally designed by the famous York architect, John Carr for the 4th Earl of Holderness, Secretary of State for the North. The Hall reception area still houses the original mosaic floor.

Robert D'Arcy, 4th Earl of Holderness died in 1778 and the Hall was sold to the Verelst family, in about 1790. Harry Verelst who bought Aston Hall was a former governor of Bengal (then part of the British Empire) and had made his fortune within the East India Company.

This hall was designed by the architect John Carr for the 4th Earl of Holderness (descendants of the D'Arcy's, of Hornby Castle). It was his daughter who owned it when she married, as her second husband, Capt. John Byron, the father of Byron, the poet.

Allergies

At Aston Hall we go above and beyond to cater for everyone, if you have any allergies or intolerances please let us know so we can adapt our menu to suit your individual requirements.
